

In handover control methods and systems which switch a radio base station serving as a communicating counterpart of a mobile station, the present invention provides a handover control method and a system thereof wherein a detection is made when a communication while a predetermined minimum bandwidth secured is not possible at any mobile station communicating with the radio base station and upon the detection the communicating counterpart of the mobile station that communicates with the radio base station mentioned above is switched from the radio base station to other radio base stations.

15